HUNTSVILLE, ALABAMA

SINCE 1941
Redstone Arsenal: From WWII Origins to Rocket City Legacy
SPEAKIN' OUT NEWS

Redstone Arsenal in Huntsville, Alabama, is a premier U.S. Army installation and cornerstone of America's defense and space missions. It hosts Army Materiel Command, NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center, Missile Defense Agency, and soon U.S. Space Command. Beyond its military strength, Redstone drives economic growth, research, and innovation across North Alabama. Huntsville has been known as the "Rocket City" since 1953, when von Braun's team began rocket development here, cementing the region's legacy in space exploration and defense.

MAKING HISTORY

Space Command Showdown: Politics, Lawsuits, and Huntsville's Historic Step Forward

SPEAKIN' OUT NEWS

Mayor Tommy Battle welcomed Gen. Stephen Whiting, Commander of U.S. Space Command, during his first visit to Huntsville City Hall. Redstone Arsenal leaders say they are prepared to begin construction for the U.S. Space Command headquarters. (City of Huntsville)

"This is an exciting moment for our city, but more importantly, it's about ensuring the security of our nation."
Mayor Tommy Battle, City of Huntsville

Huntsville leaders are moving quickly to prepare for U.S. Space Command's arrival at Redstone Arsenal. Local officials emphasize readiness and momentum. "We're ready to move dirt," said Martin Traylor, deputy garrison commander, noting temporary facilities could be operational within 18 to 24 months once requirements are finalized. Mayor Tommy Battle welcomed Gen. Stephen Whiting to City Hall, calling the visit a milestone in the transition. "We are honored to welcome

Gen. Whiting to Huntsville." Leaders say the relocation will bring 1,400 jobs, strengthen Huntsville's role as a regional hub, and highlight the city's commitment to national security, growth, innovation, and opportunity, showcasing the community's vision, resilience, and determination to support America's future in space defense.

TOURISM

EXPLORING HUNTSVILLE: FROM ROCKETS TO GARDENS TO MOUNTAIN VIEWS

SPEAKIN' OUT NEWS

The U.S. Space & Rocket Center in Huntsville, Alabama, is the world's largest space museum and the official visitor center for NASA's Marshall Space Flight Center. Opened in 1970, it showcases the Saturn V rocket, Apollo artifacts, and interactive exhibits. It's home to internationally renowned Space Camp, attracting students from over 150 countries. As Alabama's number one paid tourist attraction, the center welcomes more than 650,000 visitors annually, cementing Huntsville's reputation as the "Rocket City." Alongside the Space & Rocket Center, Monte Sano Mountain and the Huntsville Botanical Garden also stand out as top destinations, offering natural beauty and cultural experiences that draw thousands each year.

INNOVATION HUB

Cummings Research Park Shapes Huntsville's Future

SPEAKIN' OUT NEWS

Cummings Research Park in Huntsville, Alabama, is the nation's second-largest research park and a global leader in technology, aerospace, and defense innovation. Home to more than 300 companies, it fosters collaboration among government, industry, and academia, driving economic growth and advancing Huntsville's reputation as a high-tech hub. The park also supports startups, research partnerships, and workforce development, making it a dynamic ecosystem where ideas become solutions that shape the future of science, technology, and space exploration.

ARTS & LIFESTYLE

Creativity and Community Define Huntsville's Cultural Scene

SPEAKIN' OUT NEWS

Huntsville blends Southern heritage with a forward-looking spirit shaped by its space and technology legacy. The city's cultural heartbeat includes Lowe Mill ARTS & Entertainment, the nation's largest privately owned arts facility, and the Von Braun Center, hosting concerts, theater, and sporting events. Festivals like Panoply Arts Festival and Concerts in the Park showcase creativity, while craft breweries, diverse cuisine, and community pride make Huntsville a vibrant destination where tradition and innovation thrive side by side.
